1. The Alba Julia (R 26/, 83) recruiting office sent out more than 3,900 induction orders during the period from 20 to 26 April 1950. The induction primarily affected reservists of the recruit classes of 1944 and 1945 and some reservists of the recruit classes of 1939 and 1940.* About 2,500 of the reservists notified arrived at the Alba Julia military post by 1 May 1950. It was learned that 476 of them were assigned to the bridge-construction battalion, 600 to the engineer troops, and the remainder to the other units. No reservists were assigned to the militia. Two reservists assigned to the bridge-construction battalion stated that they had been inducted for a 30 to 45-day period to familiarize themselves with new equipment and new Soviet methods. The reservists were issued new uniforms and equipment and were quartered separately.

2. Only a fire-fighting company and a militia platoon for the protection of the nitrogen factories were located in Diciosanmartin (R 36/A 76) in early May 1950. No troops were stationed in town.

25X1* Comment. As reservists are usually inducted for a summer training period, the inductions are not out of the ordinary.
